SOCIETE GENERALE APPOINTS ALAIN FISCHER IN CHARGE OF THE NEWLY CREATED DIGITAL OFFICE WITHIN ITS GLOBAL BANKING & INVESTORS SOLUTIONS DIVISION

Societe Generale announces the creation of a Digital Office within its Global Banking & Investors Solutions division and appoints Alain Fischer as Chief Digital Officer. He will be in charge of defining the digital strategy and stepping up the digital transformation of all the division's businesses and will report to Didier Valet, Head of Global Banking & Investor Solutions.

The Digital Office will coordinate all projects related to digital transformation and collect market intelligence. It will also contribute to the division's partnership and investment strategy in external platforms and ensure consistency among the various digital initiatives.

« Digital technology is impacting the way we interact with clients and serve them, providing a world of opportunities to innovate while deeply transforming our businesses. In order to bring more value to our clients and maintain our competitiveness, we are accelerating our digital transformation to be more agile in a changing environment », Didier Valet commented.

« Digitalisation is an ongoing process for the financial services industry which was an early mover with the electrification of markets and is currently going through a new technological cycle. The Digital Office will enable us to go further in simplifying our architecture and tools, and delivering customized webservices with unique access points and optimized interfaces to all users. With these key principles, we will enhance the user experience and deliver innovative tailored services to our clients while monitoring technological developments which could support the transformation of our businesses », Alain Fischer added.
